Jesper Juul

Respect, Trust and Love

What children need from us

CONTENT

The legacy of the great educator Jesper Juul

»Those who bring up their children with respect will have children who treat their parents and teachers with respect.«

Jesper Juul

This is the theme which runs through Jesper Juul's life: education is a matter of respect.

This book is the renowned family therapist's legacy concerning what really matters in education. He illustrates it with many examples: the age of tantrums, school stress and puberty: All the perils involved in living with children can be overcome more easily if respect, trust and love are central points.

Jesper Juul changes our perspective and shows that it is not that our children lack respect, but that we adults lack respect, mostly unconsciously and unintentionally, for our children. The book tells us how we can change that.

»Jesper Juul is Europe's most sought-after calmness educator.« DIE ZEIT

- Final publication by the 'Advocate for Children', with unpublished texts
- Over 500,000 copies of Jesper Juul's books for Beltz have been sold
- The essence of bringing up children successfully
- Also suitable as an introduction to the educational world of Jesper Juul

AUTHOR

Jesper Juul (1948 – 2019) has been working with families for over 40 years and has long been one of the most innovative family therapists in Europe. Jesper Juul's trademark quality is his »relaxed optimism« (Der Spiegel). His message is that parents do not have to be perfect to raise their children well. His books are bestsellers and have been translated into many languages. His respectful, equitable manner of dealing with people continues to impress both parents and peers. Jesper Juul is the founder of familylab, which runs seminars and training sessions for parents in Germany, Austria, Switzerland, and 19 other countries. He left a son and two grandsons behind.

Nils Pickert

Boy Princesses

How we can free our sons from the gender trap

CONTENT

Growing up in a world where pink and blue don't matter

Boys are wild, they don't cry and they don't wear skirts: male gender norms are deeply engrained. And they can do harm to boys. If your son wants a pink bike, you, as parents, don't buy him one for fear of him being bullied.

The feminist, journalist and father Nils Pickert has written the book for parents to help combat gender clichés when bringing up their sons. It shows how this standardising of masculinity takes place when buying toys, in the school playground and in emotional life and how it inhibits boys' development. Pickert describes how many boys love - and need - dolls and caring play. He is passionate about adopting any predetermined roles and allowing boys an unlimited variety of ways to become men. With lots of ideas and specific tips to help parents support their sons.

- The first book on gender stereotypes for the parents of boys
- Passionate, sharp-witted plea against adopting predetermined roles

March 2020
256 pages; 18,95 EUR

AUTHOR

Nils Pickert was born in East Berlin in 1979. He studied literature and politics and has written as a freelance journalist in newspapers such as, Die Zeit, taz, Schweizer Tagesanzeiger and in the Austrian Standard. In 2012, in solidarity his five-year-old son, he went out wearing a skirt and caused a sensation worldwide. Since 2013 he has been involved in word and action for the association Pinkstinks against sexism and homophobia. He lives near Kiel with his life companion and four children.

Melanie Büttner / Alina Schadwinkel / Sven Stockrahm Is This Normal?

Let's talk about sex the way you want it

CONTENT

Sex which makes you happy has no norms

Prosexual, mature - this is how the world in which we live today works. The fatal thing about it is that, when it comes to sex, we are confronted with clichés which are often dubious, and a whole range of myths. And they can really stress us out. Instead of a liberated sexuality, the pressure to meet expectations grows. Of course, sexuality has many facets. A lack of desire is quite normal, as is the longing for fetishes and porn or the need for intimacy and tenderness.

Sex therapist Dr Melanie Büttner and science journalists Alina Schadwinkel and Sven Stockrahm add to what we know about sex in an entertaining way. The psyche is given just as much attention as the body and our relationships. This is not only fun, but above all makes us curious to get to know our own sexual needs better.

Contents

1. Too liberated to be free - how porn and new stereotypes influence our sexuality
2. This is me - my sexual identity
3. My body and me - how sex feels good
4. You and me - sex and the relationship
5. Something's going wrong - problems with sex
6. I don't know what to do - professional support

- From the creators of the successful ZEIT-ONLINE sex podcast 'Is this normal?' with 50,000 downloads per episode
- The perfect remedy for insecurity, fears and myths
- A personal guide to the latest research, sex therapy and medicine

AUTHORS

Dr Melanie Büttner is a sex therapist and a specialist in psychosomatic medicine and psychotherapy. She heads the sex consultation sessions at the University Hospital Rechts der Isar in Munich and also has her own practice. In the ZEIT-ONLINE sex podcast »Is this normal?« she answers questions from listeners put to her by Alina Schadwinkel and Sven Stockrahm.

Alina Schadwinkel heads the online editorial office of Spektrum.de. Among other things, she has been awarded the Georg von Holtzbrinck Prize and nominated for the Grimme Online Award.

Sven Stockrahm is the deputy head of the knowledge and digital section at ZEIT-ONLINE. Among other things, he has won the Axel Springer Prize and been nominated for the Grimme Online Award.

TYPE OF BOOK / TARGET GROUP

Kathrin Borghoff

Being a Highly Sensitive Mom

Resource book

CONTENT

Every fifth mother is highly sensitive

Between unbelievable exhaustion and infinite love. Between extremely high demands, a guilty conscience and total irritability. For highly sensitive mothers, having children is particularly demanding. This book helps to transform the personal challenges you face into strengths.

Against the background of the latest research results and her personal experiences, Kathrin Borghoff, herself a highly sensitive mother, provides strategies and exercises for mothers which can be put into action directly in everyday life. Her positive, affirmative approach points to how she was able to combine her own particular temperament with a bonding-based upbringing for her children. The point being that highly sensitive people can be particularly aware of the needs of others thanks to this very sensitivity they have. As soon as you know how to apply targeted stress reduction, mindfulness and relaxation to your own situation, you will finally accept your special sensitivity as a gift.

- Written in a lively and personal way
- With all kinds of strategies and exercises for self-care

AUTHOR

Kathrin Borghoff, born in 1987, first recognised how highly sensitive she was when she became a mother herself. The founder of the Dortmund Family School trained as a family coach with a focus on high sensitivity, stress reduction via mindfulness and relaxation techniques. She is the mother of two little boys: her blog www.oeko-hippie-rabenmuetter.de gets around 300,000 hits a year. She is well-known for her workshops and lectures and is available for events.

Breaking the Schematic Mold

Understanding your inner child, changing behaviour patterns and breaking new ground

Updated edition

CONTENT

Your inner child can change

Offended, stubborn, sad, withdrawal: we all have ways of thinking and behaving which disturb us or even harm us. Why should that be? And how can we change this?

The causes lie in the behaviour patterns we developed way back in childhood. Depending on the situation, different parts of our inner child take control inside us. Only when we understand these parts and the patterns related to them can our adult self take over responsibility. Then we can counter our feelings of anger with healthy behaviour patterns.

A guide full of exercises that help to free yourself from constraints and inhibitions and to find lasting feelings of ease and inner peace.

- Effective strategies against stubborn behaviour patterns
- With an overview of extreme personality traits
